

Young Author Best Presentation – Entropy Award

The Young Author Best Presentation – Entropy Award recognizes an outstanding lightning talk and poster presentation at FFCS 2026 that stands out for its originality, significance of the topic, and excellence of presentation. The award is sponsored by the journal Entropy.

To be eligible for the FFCS Young Author Best Presentation – Entropy Award, all of the following criteria must be met:

- The candidate must be a PhD student.
- The candidate must be the principal (lead) author of the presented work.
- The candidate must be the presenting author at the conference.

The Award Committee will be chaired by Prof. Eduard Jorswieck, who will select the best presentation(s) among the eligible candidates based on the scientific quality (including originality and potential impact of the results) as well as the quality of the presentation.

The nominated authors and the award winner will be announced during the conference.
