“Cross-linguistic influence and between-language priming in bilingual children”

In this talk, a series of studies will be presented on cross-linguistic influence and between-language priming in bilingual children.

Furthermore, factors will be discussed that have been found to predict the presence and strength of cross-linguistic influence, such as surface overlap (e.g., Hulk & Müller, 2001) and language dominance. In addition, the outcomes of the studies will be considered in relation to the debate to what extent bilingual children develop shared syntactic systems.
